SUMMARY

I'm a committed and eager front-end developer who is excited about all facets of software development. Initially I went to school to study graphic design and transitioned into marketing, but wrestled with feeling something was missing. When I discovered the inventive and limitless world of software development, I knew that this is where my drive would be satisfied. Front-end development blends my knack of problem solving with my love of creativity and innovation. My non-traditional tech background has strengthened my understanding of consumer needs, communication, and overall ability to contribute as a vital team player.
